THE RISK MATRIX OF PROJECT FINANCE IN THE HEALTHCARE SECTOR

New or restructured healthcare infrastructures are a typical risky investment, which can be financed in many different and competing ways. Public Private Partnership and project financing techniques are increasingly recognized as a useful and appropriate device.
Risk identification, transfer, sharing and management are a key point of the whole structure and the risk matrix, used in order to classify and - wherever possible - measure risk is an unavoidable part of the package. To the extent that it can be professionally managed by specialized agents, risk sharing or transmission is not a zero sum game, even if fairly pricing risk is never a trivial issue.
While the public part traditionally bears core market risk (demand for health services), other key risks, such as those related to construction and management of commercial (hot) activities, are typically transferred to the private part, often represented by a SPV.
An analysis of the SPV's governance peculiarities helps to understand why milder information asymmetries and softer conflicts of interest can allow for higher even if unsecured leverage.
An original link between financial and operating risk is proposed in this paper, together with an analytical description of the main kinds of risk.

1. INTRODUCTION

Health project finance (PF) is the financing of long-term hospital social infrastructures based upon a complex financial structure where project debt and equity are used to finance the project, rather than to reward project sponsors.
Usually, a project financing structure involves a number of equity investors, known as sponsors, as well as a syndicate of banks that provide loans to the operation. The loans are most commonly non-recourse, paid entirely from project cash flow, rather than from the general assets or creditworthiness of the project sponsors.

Abstract

Creativity, it is like the other human qualities, it can be educated and developed and put in value, and creativity always represents a source of power and energy. The computer replaced the books, the cartoons and movies replaced the pleasure of reading, we have to find new methods to make a fishing game attractive for students, from a symbolic game to the target result. Even if the computer created an imaginary world, he will never replace the teachers place, the smile, and the emotions of the answer and the good remarks of the teachers. The 6 M method can be used by everybody; the method doesn't need a big effort and can be applied to different types of classes and different categories of students. The 6 M are: methods, materials, motivation, meditation, mind, and mass media.

1. Introduction

In the rapidly running of human person and his machinery to other planets we use huge resources to make all this dream come truth. As we can observe our society is in a continuing movement and modification, in an age of computers. Will we be able to pass this sock wave of future? Will we be able to adapt to this? The new shape of society can be seen in the unclear future.

The parents hope that the education will prepare their children for the future life style. The teachers warn the young generation about the deficit of the actual system, all the institutions give warm recomandations to go to school insisting on the matter that now more then ever the future depend on the end of studies.
